

To whom it may concern,

I have owned a Central Boiler outside wood furnace since 2002 and have had no problems from any neighbor regarding smoke or emissions. I use it to heat my house in the winter and pool in the spring and fall to extend the swimming season for my family.

I never burn trash or tires or any other environmentally unfriendly substance, only wood, the same wood my neighbors burn in their fireplaces. The same wood people in New England have heated their homes with for hundreds of years.

In these tough economic times and with the ever fluctuating price of home heating oil my outdoor wood furnace has provided substantial savings to my family year after year, as well as providing a place for a local tree service to bring perfectly good wood that would otherwise end up in a landfill, where he would be charged for its disposal.

With the increasing need for energy independence in America I think we all need to search for alternatives. I have found my outdoor wood furnace to be one way for me to greatly reduce my need for imported oil.
